Ask Questions

Not sure if what happened is a sanctuary law violation?

Call us and we can guide you.

What is Oregon's Sanctuary Promise?

In Oregon, state and local government, including police, are not allowed to enforce federal immigration law unless they have a court order signed by a judge.

When to report a Sanctuary Promise violation?

- If police question you about your national origin or immigration status.
- If you see state or local government or police collaborate with federal immigration authorities.
- If you see police working with ICE to coordinate traffic stops.
- If individuals who are in jail or on probation are denied services, benefits, or privileges based on their immigration status.
- If you are arrested in court or while you are traveling to or from court, without a court order signed by a judge.
- Not sure? Give us a call.

Our Vision

Oregon is a safe place, where all people are welcome, included, and have equitable opportunity to thrive free from hate and discrimination, and where our institutions support and respond to the needs of the people.

Oregon was the first state in the nation to establish sanctuary laws in 1987.
